"ONE WET NIGHT"

One-Reel Universal Comedy

Starring F. J. EDWARDS
and BERT ROACH

HUBBY disregards his wife's advice to take an umbrella to the office, because of the threatening sky, and attempts to come home in his puddle-jumper, before the rain starts. He gets well splashed by passing cars when he steps out of his flivver to repair a punctured tire. Arriving home in a downpour, he sends the valet for his dry clothes, but the servant, with great presence of mind, has hung them on a line (in the rain) to air.

That night one of the guests, attempting to demonstrate his new shotgun, fires a load through the ceiling and roof, letting in a torrent of rain. In order to save the carpet, hubby moves over the grand piano under the hole to catch the water. When that fills, they bring in the bathtub. When it is full they dump it on the floor and replace it under the hole. The guests stay all night to avoid getting wet, but one of them runs home through the pouring rain to get his pajamas. The rest of the night is spent playing cards in bathing suits under an open umbrella.
